DBIA MEMBERSHIP FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is a Public/Private Owner?

Owners decide what gets built, when it gets built and how it gets built. They are the organizations (or individuals who work for those organizations) that control the design and construction processes. This does NOT include firms and/or people that provide design and construction services such as contractors, A/E firms, architects, etc. Examples include: Real Estate Developer, Private Facility Owner, Academic Institution, Government Agency (Federal, Local/City, State, Military), and Non-Profit Association.

Do I have to join a Region separately?

DBIA is a dual membership organization, meaning that Region membership is included with your national dues at no additional cost. Your Region is determined by your physical address.

Are my DBIA dues tax deductible?

Dues are tax deductible as ordinary and necessary business expenses under IRS Tax Code Section 162(3) except for that portion allocable to "lobbying" under Public Law #103-66. DBIA estimates that 97% of your dues payment is deductible and 3% non-deductible.

When does my membership expire?

Your DBIA membership is effective 12 months from your membership approval date. For example, if you joined in January 2017, then your renewal date will be January 31, 2018. Thereafter it will be the same month of the following year and so on.

What is an Additional IP Contact?

Additional contacts come from organizations that have already joined DBIA as an industry partner. Industry partners that fill their allocated number of free contacts may add additional contacts at an additional cost.

How long does it take for my membership to be processed and active? What happens once my application is processed?

It takes approximately one business day for your application to be processed and active. You will receive an emailed confirmation that will include your login information for the DBIA website as well as any other pertinent items, including information about your Region.
